Some people think that these types of things make no difference. I disagree.

#XRPHolders got the attention of the The New York Times. Pulitzer Prize winning Investigative reporters are starting to pay attention.

Let's try and get Gary Gensler's attention on Friday by signing.

IG complaints works as well.

"The OIG conducts audits and evaluations of SEC programs and operations and investigates allegations of fraud, waste, or abuse at or against the SEC".

One thing that is not getting enough attention is that scamcoins, and dump schemes are everywhere, but not being addressed. Meanwhile they are worried about Ripple and xrp. People are being scammed left and right.

Some people think that these types of things make no difference. I disagree. If XRP holders got the attention of the SEC, it would be a great idea. This would open the door for lots of scrutiny of many other companies. The judge as fair as they may be knows what the wide scope of ramifications of this could be. Pandora's box she won't open.

How come by approval sec, coinbase did its ipo? In their ipo price are profit made by xrp sales. Coinbase paid their taxes over xrp gains and formed part of their 380usd ipo price. How is this allowed by sec if xrp was not allowed to sell? Coinbase ipo should be reduced to 320?
